

Congratulations! This is as much your victory as ours.

You've been with us for a year now, sharing our journey. And now it has all paid off. After sixteen years of persistent badgering and raising awareness of the plight of the beautiful Bornean Orangutans we have secured funding to see through the next stage in our plan to help secure these magnificent creatures natural habitat. Your support in this has been essential. Everyone who plays their part, from those who raise awareness to those who make donations. If fifty thousand people were able to donate just one pound a week that would create over £2.5 million in just one year. Just imagine how much that would do to improve the lives of the wonderful apes of Borneo.

Courtesy of the wonderful public professing outrage at the appalling destruction caused by palm oil farming in these beautiful rainforests, we have managed between us all to make a global stand. We have all shown that we are not willing to forsake this glorious planet on which we depend to allow corporations to make shortcuts. These shortcuts have caused so many damage for many years and now the time has arrived to rectify this.

Your regular monthly support is what has enabled us to make these achievement and we are extremely grateful. We know there are so many worthwhile causes out there worthy of your support and we want to say a massive thank you for choosing the plight of the Bornean Orangutans.

For the next phase in our long term plan, we want to ensure that all areas of the rainforest are managed entirely naturally. That means ensuring that the rangers merely act as a barrier against external threats. It's a sad fact that in spite of extensive knowledge of the ramifications of deforestation and species degradation, many of our most at risk animals are still mercilessly hunted. Poachers are the next biggest risk and we are hoping to instigate government legislation criminalising the murder and capture of wild Orangutans. With the provision of registered rangers, those wishing to do harm in the rainforest will be legally prosecuted and with that kind of risk to their behaviour, we anticipate a huge reduction in the numbers present
